

'No Persuasive Evidence' of Conspiracies, Report Says

Kennedy, King Deaths Probes Officially

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has officially ended its inquiry into the assassinations of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr., finding "no persuasive evidence" to support conspiracy theories, according to department documents.

A Justice Department memo, obtained by a California ophthalmologist through the Freedom of Information Act, was the department's admittedly long-overdue response to the House Select Committee on Assassinations' recommendation 10 years ago for further investigation.

William F. Weld, who was head of the department's criminal division until he quit at the end of March, told Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, that all known leads have been checked.

"The Department of Justice has concluded that no persuasive evidence can be identified to support the theory of a conspiracy in either the assassination of President Kennedy or the assassination of Dr. King," Weld wrote in the undated memo.

"No further investigation appears to be warranted in either matter unless new information which is sufficient to support additional investigative activity becomes available," he added.

The Justice Department's response to the conspiracy theories comes as no surprise. It is, however, the first time the department has made a formal conclusion on the assassinations, said Justice spokesman Dean St. Denis.

The House Assassinations Committee concluded in 1978 that Kennedy was "probably" assassinated as the result of a conspiracy involving a second gunman, a finding that broke from the Warren Commission's belief that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. The House panel also said there was a "likelihood" that King's slaying in 1968 was part of a conspiracy.

The committee urged the Justice Department to investigate several areas of the assassinations, and one year later the department agreed to conduct a limited inquiry focusing on an acoustical study presented to the committee by independent experts.

The acoustical experts had concluded after studying a Dictaphone recording of a Dallas policeman's open radio transmissions that there was a second gunman on the infamous grassy knoll who fired a fourth shot. That evidence was the key to the committee's second-gunner conclusion.

Justice officials instructed the National Academy of Sciences to review that study and the Dictaphone recording, and academy scientists concluded in 1982 that the independent experts were

Friday, but a former select committee aide who has fought to have the panel's records opened to the public blasted the department's response.

"All these years later, we find out they've been doing nothing," said Kevin Walsh. "Members themselves had faith that the Justice Department was going to pursue this, and now we see all these years later that their faith was misplaced."

Walsh noted that the department did not follow through on several parts of the select committee's recommendations.

The "most egregious sin," according to Walsh, was the department's failure to obtain and analyze a bystander's film shot just minutes before the Kennedy assassination. The film by Charles L. Bronson scans the sixth-floor window of the Texas School Book Depository, where Oswald was positioned.

"If you have film footage that bears on a murder case, you subpoena it," Walsh said. "They didn't even consider it."
